Tutoring Experience

I have nearly two decades of experience teaching history and politics across various levels, including GCSE, IB, and A-Level. I've guided students through topics such as the Cold War, the Russian Revolution, and European diplomacy, focusing on enhancing analytical and essay-writing skills tailored to exam board specifications.

In addition to teaching, I have supervised university dissertations on Soviet foreign policy and 20th-century international relations. I've also helped students navigate competitive admissions processes for top universities, providing guidance on personal statements and interview preparation. My passion lies in connecting historical contexts with modern-day politics, fostering a deeper understanding for my students.
